

GAME DESIGN CAMP

SPRING BREAK • 2014

FOR

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

:WHAT

CLE Game Design Camp

provides diverse students the opportunity to participate in the exciting production of their own video game while developing personal and team participation skills. Students learn the intricacies of the video game design process, then put their newfound knowledge to work.

Designing with professional industry software, participants infuse their creativity into the design, creation and development of their own game. Students also focus on enhancing their interpersonal skills through group activities such as self-esteem and team building led by the CLE staff psychologist.

:WHO

High school students with learning or developmental disabilities have the opportunity to participate in Game Design Camp.

15 students will be selected to participate. All qualified applicants will be contacted by a CLE staff member to schedule an interview.

It's remarkable to witness the imagination of students thrive when they are in an environment where they can be themselves. By learning to use industry standard design software, students develop skills that can be used for years to come!

DAVID TORRENTE
GAME DESIGN INSTRUCTOR

:HOW

Students immerse themselves in the art, programming and design of video games through:

- Creating a video game from concept to the finished product
- Designing with professional grade software
- Working with a team to organize, plan, and execute
- Showcasing the customized game
- Enjoying their hard work, by taking home the one of a kind designed game!
